The chain of survival refers to a series of actions that, properly executed, reduce the mortality associated with cardiac arrest. Like any chain, the chain of survival is only as strong as its weakest link. The four interdependent links in the chain of survival are early access, early CPR, early defibrillation, and early advanced cardiac life support

BACKGROUND: Recent clinical trial results have suggested that programmed cell death ligand 1 (PD-L1) expression measured by immunohistochemistry may predict response to anti-programmed cell death 1 (PD-1) therapy. Results on the association between PD-L1 expression and survival among patients with advanced non-small cell lung cancer (NSCLC) treated with chemotherapy are inconsistent.

Before analysis, the observed survival times were first sorted in ascending order, starting with the patient with the shortest survival time. This resulted in Table 1 showing the patient deaths and the censored observations over the first 1708 days. By then, considering time in many small intervals, it becomes possible to calculate the probability of surviving a given day.
